Perhaps you've been looking for something different, searching high and low; Ohio Amish Country and its flea market are where you can find it. At the newly-relocated and expanded flea market, there's no need to travel to small, obscure shops to find that special antique or collectible. You'll find everything from handmade wood items to crafts, antiques and quilts, or to whatever else may interest you . . . but this is only the start of a great tour on a Saturday and it's ideal for those who have to work during the week.

Dinner is also special, since we'll be having a meal that this area is famous for. Their bountiful servings, shared with family-style meals, have been pleasing townspeople and tourists for over thirty years. No one will want to skip a tempting piece of their homemade pie for dessert either. Many guests enjoy the rocking chairs on the front porch, listening to the clip-clop of buggies passing through the Amish farming valley. We'll also be making stops at the impressive Carlisle House, the Der Dutchman Bakery, Coblenz Chocolates and, just before we head for home, an Amish meat market that offers bacon, steaks, smoked pork chops and other great items you may want to take with you. We've again expanded this tour to include Sol's Exchange in Berlin, with its various shops offering furniture, candles, quilts, handmade dolls and even goose clothes.
